

KLE TECH MEDIA CLUB

THE CAMERA

COMPLETE STORY — PART 1 + PART 2

Format: Cinematic recruitment short film • Two connected parts

PART 1 — THE DISCOVERY

THE CAMERA

A junior is walking through campus when he notices a camera lying on a bench. He picks it up, looks around for its owner, and switches it on. He starts going through the photographs inside. He sees moments from college—people laughing, events, performances, small moments that normally go unnoticed. One particular photograph catches his attention. He looks around at the campus, almost as if he's seeing it differently for the first time.

RETURNING THE CAMERA

A senior suddenly appears nearby, searching for something. The junior realizes the camera belongs to him and walks over. The junior asks if he is looking for the camera. The senior takes it from him and simply says:

DIALOGUE REFERENCE

SENIOR: "Thank you."

THE T-SHIRT

The senior walks away. The junior watches him disappear into the crowd. As he turns around, a student walks past wearing a KLE TECH MEDIA CLUB T-shirt, with the club branding clearly visible on the back. The junior notices it. He looks at the T-shirt, then toward the senior. Something clicks.

THE DISCOVERY

He takes out his phone and searches for KLE Tech Media Club. He starts scrolling through their work—photography, films, events, editing, design, VJ and other creative work. He is impressed. Then he sees the recruitment poster: KLE TECH MEDIA CLUB — RECRUITMENT OPEN. He looks at it for a moment, but he doesn't fill the form.

THE FRESHER GROUP

The next day, the junior is walking through college when he notices a group of freshers sitting together. One is showing photographs on his phone. Another is talking about videography. Someone is editing on a laptop. Another is working on a design. Someone else is interested in VJ/live visuals.

THE CONVERSATION

The junior approaches them. They start talking and realize that they all have different creative interests. Eventually, the conversation reaches the same problem: they have the talent, but they don't have a platform to showcase it.

THE RECRUITMENT POSTER

The junior remembers the recruitment poster. He takes out his phone and shows it to them. They get interested. Someone asks whether he applied. He admits that he hasn't. Everyone laughs. Then someone suggests that they apply together.

THE FORM

They all open the recruitment form. Phones come out. Everyone starts filling it. The junior reaches the final question: WHY DO YOU WANT TO JOIN KLE TECH MEDIA CLUB? He thinks for a moment, then types his answer. He presses SUBMIT. One by one, the others submit their forms too.

END OF PART 1

They look at each other and smile. They have just met, but something has started.

CUT TO BLACK.

7 DAYS LATER...

PART 2 — THE WAIT

7 DAYS LATER

Morning. The junior wakes up. Before even getting out of bed, he checks his phone. Nothing. He gets ready and goes to college.

THE GROUP

He meets the same group. Something has changed. They're no longer strangers. They've spent the past week talking, joking and sharing their creative interests. One shows a photograph. Another makes fun of his editing. Someone records the group on their phone. They laugh.

THE QUESTION

Then someone suddenly asks: "Results today, right?" Everyone checks their phones. Nothing.

THE MEDIA SENIOR

Later, while walking through campus, they spot a Media Club senior wandering around. They recognize him from the club. The entire group looks at each other and walks toward him together.

DIALOGUE REFERENCE

The group asks when the results will be out. The senior smiles and teases them about being nervous. They keep trying to get an exact answer. He refuses to reveal anything and tells them they'll know when the results are out. He walks away. The group looks at each other and jokes that he definitely knows.

THE DAY TOGETHER

Instead of going home, they decide to spend the evening together. They walk around campus, eat together, sit on the steps, talk and laugh. They show each other their work. The photographer takes pictures on his phone. The videographer records random moments. The editor starts putting clips together. The designer shows an idea. The VJ talks about visuals he wants to create.

THE ZNMD FEEL

The conversation becomes more personal. They talk about what they want to do in college, what they want to create and what they hope people will see. Keep this section spontaneous and friendship-driven: playful teasing, honest thoughts, small arguments and laughter. The influence is the feeling of friends enjoying the moment together—not copied scenes or dialogue.

THE QUESTION

One of them asks what happens if they don't get selected. After a pause, someone says that they will still create. Everyone smiles. The result suddenly feels less important than the fact that they have found people who share the same passion.

SUNSET

They sit together watching the sunset. Nobody is checking their phones anymore. They're simply enjoying the moment. Then—PING. Everyone freezes.

RESULTS ARE OUT

The junior looks at his phone. The notification reads: KLE TECH MEDIA CLUB — RECRUITMENT RESULTS ARE OUT. Everyone looks at each other. Nobody wants to open it. They joke nervously and push the responsibility onto each other. Finally, the main junior opens the list.

THE RESULT

He scrolls. Nothing. Scrolls again. Then—SELECTED. He looks up. The others immediately check their phones. One by one: SELECTED. SELECTED. SELECTED. The group erupts. High-fives, hugs, laughter. Someone shouts that they got in.

THE FIRST MEMORY

After the excitement settles, the junior looks at them—the same people he met only a week ago. He takes out his phone and asks for one photo. Everyone gathers. Someone jokes about him already becoming the group's photographer. They laugh. He raises the phone.

CLICK.

Freeze frame. Their first photograph together. It isn't perfectly posed. Someone is laughing. Someone is looking away. But it's real.

THE CONNECTION

The photograph slowly transitions into the photograph the junior saw inside the senior's camera in Part 1. Two different photographs, but the same idea: someone captured a moment.

FINAL THOUGHT

Part 1 began with the junior discovering someone else's memories. Part 2 ends with him creating a memory of his own—with the friends he found along the way.
